Dear NAAFA,

I got my copy of the Winter Edition and again, "Job well done"! After reading it this morning I have come to the conclusion that anyone in their right mind wouldn't continue to represent American Family. I believe that AFMIC will implode!

I chuckled when I read an article by an agent with 19 years experience and how he thought AFMIC was so much better when he started his career. I was terminated over 17 years ago after nearly 30 years with AFMIC. Most of those 17 years were spent trying to improve/change/gain the independence I was promised.

My first 10 years were not so bad but I then started to realize that our competition was not the greedy lot that AFMIC wanted us to believe. I was recruited by an independent after just a year in the business but our rates were really good and I didn't have the money to risk change, so I just kept writing as fast as I could.

We can't change the past; we can only ask "Where do we go from here?" I compliment both of you for getting that message out!

The class action that was just filed is something that should have been done 40 years ago.
