

NAAFA,

All I can say after reading The Back Page, [Sept. 2009 All American] A Vital Link—now and in the future by Gerry Benusa, is that District Managers better watch out. When the company starts telling you “it’s an exciting time to be a DM,” you know things are gonna get bad for you. Time and time again when the company pats you on the back with one hand, it picks your pocket with the other. Another warning is when they say, “At this point, we don’t know exactly what those changes might be” you know right up front they have some bad news in store...they just haven’t figured out how to tell you yet.

Look behind you, DM’s!