

WHO IS THIS MR. ANDERSON, JUST ANOTHER BRAIN-WASHED AGENT?" 6/1/2010

My question is, "Who is this Mr. Anderson, just another brain-washed agent?" Years ago, I was our district's rep to the Agent's Roundtable, chosen by the agents in my district, not by management. There is a big difference. If chosen by the DM, they will always choose a brown-noser, which Mr. Anderson obviously is.

Jack's pay should be based on company profit, stability and performance, not on where he fits into industry standards. Judging by AF's overall poor showing the past few years, the huge raise he received isn't warranted or deserved. And how does Mr. Anderson know how much time Jack puts in? Did Jack tell him that, or did he spend a week following Jack around?

The only people afraid to sign their name are anyone admitting belonging to NAAFA, or anyone with a negative comment regarding AF. He could send this letter to AF and probably get a pat on the back for sending it. He certainly wouldn't get into any trouble. I don't see this as a step forward for relations with AF. This guy is just a very minor player in AF's scheme of things.

As I said, I was our district's rep for several years in these meetings. We voiced our fellow agents' opinions and very little was ever accomplished. I would guess after we all left, our suggestions were thrown in the wastebasket. I eventually resigned my rep status, as I didn't feel any problems were ever solved. The Agent's Roundtable was just something to pacify the agency force to counteract the newly formed agents' association.
